The Outlookers Corner

OUTLOOKERS' RECIPE
COLUMN

What hogs from St. Clair grabbed all of Josephine Kovic's super-creamed, melts-in-your-mouth fudge?

Whose rotten, mushy, squashy, bananas were being "flung" from Outlookers to Spartan Jrs. on the bus?

Some noive our mascots got, leaving a precious package of food to reach a state of decadence in the bus, so that when cousin Andrew walked bravely into the aforementioned vehicle three days later he prit'neer collapsed from the "odeur" issuing forth.

The Outlookers must have bought more banana splits in three days at Bridgeville than they sold previously in twenty years.

The Bridgeville flour mills will be kept busy day and night with a tripled staff for several years trying to make up for the bread supply which was exhausted by our half-starved cannibals.

You should have seen "Chef Boy-Ar-Dee" Andy Artel rolling his spaghetti like a genuine foreigner!

Shake well and keep till next month when we'll be back.

A FAREWELL TO FRANKIE

During the next month, the SSPZ Vrtec loses a fine member. Although he has chosen Indianapolis as his home, his name is recognized by "Napredek" readers throughout the United States. He has filled our Vrtec page with stories that have made our hearts feel lighter. He has, although not an actual member of the baseball team, stood by them through victory and defeat, with encouragement and praise. He has been the leader of a group of boys, who earned an enviable reputation in Bridgeville, that of being fine sports.

Our friend this year rises above us to join the ranks of the seniors. Hoping that he will continue his splendid writing, especially that in the lighter vein to which we have become accustomed, we, the Collinwood Outlookers, extend a farewell and best wishes for future success to the pioneer president of the Indianapolis Jugoslavs, FRANKIE MIVEC.

CLEVELAND CELEBRATES!

October 9 marks an important date on the Cleveland SSPZ calendar. In celebration of the lodge's thirtieth year of existence, the combined Cleveland units will hold an affair on this day in the Slovene National Home.

Although I have receive no advance information on the plans of our other four lodges, I can safely say that as far as the Outlookers are concerned, they certainly have planned something unique and very original to offer you. Meet Ursula and hubby (hic! hic!), Percy and Lulabelle with their — (no, I'm afraid I can't tell), weinies, and weinie buns, comedy and "tragedy", in a playlet packed with products of the imagination and originality of our youth run wild. Just to be sure that the entire audience will receive the highest degree of enjoyment out of the performance, the play has been written in part Slovene, part English. We're having loads of fun putting it together, and we're sure you'll do the same when you see it.

Rumor has it that our Brother Vrhovnik will be present to show movies taken at the Athletic Meet. No one who was there will want to miss seeing them, and those of you who had the misfortune to be unable to attend, really ought to come down and see shots of the fun we had there.

Watch for the time and program in future issues of the "Napredek" but mark the date on your calendar "Reserved", so that you won't forget about it.

P.S. If you can't bring the kiddies along with you, be sure to leave them in the hands of a trustworthy chaperon, for after our performance of "When the Cat's Away, the Mice Will Play" you won't feel safe unless you did so.

Valeria Artel, Sec'y.

OUTLOOKERS, PLEASE NOTE!

Please be present at our meeting, Friday, October 7th, at 7 p.m. SHARP. At this time we will hold our final play rehearsal and all Vrtec 11 members are needed in the supporting cast.

Bail Me Out Quick

By Frank Mivec

I just know I'm putting a bad influence on this paper, telling about my sorrowful and sometimes shameful experiences, but I must tell you once more what evil misfortune has befallen me. Hereafter I shall be more careful and not write about myself in the Vrtec section again.

I would not have written this time, but I must defend myself somehow, or what will my friends think of me. Especially now when I am in the right. I of August we find many things victory was swell. Julie and I your mind and come. We are going to have some important things to discuss.

"Whooppee-e!! Let's sing another one boys. I feel good to-night."

"You drank enough Zaitz!" "There's plenty left. Now what will it be?"

"How about the one about the Ford machine?"

"O.K. all together now..." Bought myself a Ford machine,

Filled her up with gasoline. And turned the crank to make her go.

"Wouldn't wait for me to get in,

Now I own a pile of tin, But every month I step right up and pay.

"Hey, Mutt how about getting in tune for once..."

What's that? I'll 'konfлота, you one if you insult me like that again. I'll hit you so hard you'll think it's two o'clock instead of one —

One o'clock! Hey man!! What my dad don't do to me! I have to get home from this party. Hey Prap! Prap! Where in the same hill is he? Hey Tony, where's Prap — He's playing post-office — I don't care what he's doing. I don't know where he is."

I had a time dragging Prap out of that room. Looked like all the girls were in there kissing him, but I wanted to get his advice. But he not only didn't help me, he talked so much about his gals I couldn't think either.

Dropping Prap off, I walked the half block to my home. Not daring to go in I sat down on the curb thinking... thinking... thinking until I finally remembered my window was open. Now if I had the luck of other people nothing more would have happened, but alas and alac, just as I was halfway through the window the long arm of the law grabbed me by the seat of my trousers, and with a jerk that shook me speechless, he roughly set me on the ground. And without a word he carted me off in the general direction of the police station.

Not until we came to the station could I make him understand that I was trying to enter my own home. Since I had a record they would have to summon my father before I could be released.

There I was again. I won't describe it for I certainly do not like it that well, but never again, "Never Again."

Ann Strazar: The truth is he has golden colored hair and a sun-tan that is gorgeous brown.

Horal Lesnik: I like the gold part—it represents my future (rich, I hope).

Elbin Blazich: We're as good as gold and brown is a harmonizing color.

Virginia Kmet: Hiawatha liked the brown-eyed sun and thus we represent his likeness in one more respect.

Frank Lesnik: I didn't want brown and gold. Navy blue and gold are so much better.

Florence Kmet: Gold represents the best and we Hiawathians try to be the best.

Julie and I your mind and come. We are going to have some important things to discuss.

Almost every Hiawathan left on some sort of vacation trip and a majority of the members visited the Illinois State Fair. It was the best Fair we've seen and all plan on going again next year. Then on August 13th very early in the morning a very good pal of ours Ann G. attired in a beautiful outfit took her life partner to help paddle her canoe of life. Congratulations Ann! and my happiness be yours.

Well, we hope to see more writing in the future from other Vrtec members, and also hope to meet again.

What was Johnny, manager of the Challenger Jrs. doing at the Sygan Vrtec's games. It sure wasn't the games, was it the girls, Johnny?

The Girard Vrtec Named "Budgets"

GIRARD, O. — At our last meeting, held on Sept. 2, we finally decided on our name — "Budgets." The dollar prize will be divided among our members for ice cream and cake after our meeting on Oct. 7, 1938. Now all you members keep the date in Alka-Seltzer; Monument Valley Park, Seven Falls, a one way road winds through scenic North Cheyene Canon 7000 feet up to the Cave of the Winds. The Cave of the Winds ranks as one of the most unusual geological phenomena in the world. A guide leads the way far into the interior of the mountain's beautiful caverns with transparent rocks called stalactite hanging from the ceiling having different forms representing animals, flowers, chandeliers.

The famous Pike's Peak you can reach either by rail called the cog-road or drive on that winding road to the top of the mountain which is 14,109 feet high. The view from the peak is most wonderful. Will Roger's Shrine of the Sun, a beautiful monument is located near here. It was built out of one solid rock.

The largest and also the capital city of Colorado is Denver. The capitol building with its gilded dome glistening in the sun, surrounded with shade trees from all over the world planted over the spacious ground is a beautiful sight. Pueblo has many manufacturing industries and the largest steel mills west of Chicago. There is a large settlement of Slovene people in the city dating back more than fifty years.

I would like to hear from other Vrtec members and will gladly answer all letters. I am twelve years old and in the 7th grade.

Impressions Of My Trip Out West

at last the railroads, automobile highways and air mail.

Pueblo has many manufacturing industries and the largest steel mills west of Chicago. There is a large settlement of Slovene people in the city dating back more than fifty years.

The next morning we visited the Royal Gorge. If you want a real thrill look down the Royal Gorge, the temperature read 90 above zero but I had goose flesh down my back. Because of the narrow confines the view from the top of the Royal Gorge is awe-inspiring. You see the passenger train as it stops under the suspension bridge which is the highest bridge in the world, 1052 feet high. They have an incline railway to take people down the Gorge also. The passenger train then starts on its way again the roar of dashing Arkansas River couples with the echo of the locomotive thru the Gorge and the black smoke swirling up the great walls is very effective.

We went on for several hundred miles across Nebraska's plains, with rich abundant crops. Like a straight white line runs the fine oiled road. There were many threshing crews to be seen and many towns of different sizes and at Hollridge we turned south into Kansas. While going through Kansas we saw some desert country, the scene dust storms caused by the dry prairies. In places nothing but sagebrush grows. We happened to hit one of these storms, then came a rain of short duration which killed the dust. In the afternoon we left Kansas and crossed into Colorado.

While driving along we were amazed at the queer decorations of the highway "furnished" by the dead rabbits. The cars must kill untold numbers of them everyday. Also, grasshoppers were so thick they made driving difficult as whole swarms were smashed on the windshield. We arrived in Pueblo, Colorado late in the evening, about 9:30 o'clock. Some of our relatives live there so we were received very cordially and we too were very glad to see them after so many years. Among them were some I met for the first time.

In 1879 the Denver and Rio Grande R. R. was completed through the Royal Gorge. It is recognized as one of the great engineering accomplishments of that day.

On Dec. 8, 1929, the world's highest bridge was opened to the public.

On the way coming back we drove on the famous skyline drive at Canon City, which climbs to the top of a long knife-edged ridge and travels along its undulating crest for a mile or more before dropping down into Canon City and the plains on one hand and mountains and orchards in the valleys on the other.

We left Pueblo, drove on another hundred miles south and visited relatives and friends in the coal mining towns in Aguilar, Trinidad, on the border line of New Mexico. Then we turned back, stopped in Colorado Springs, the millionaires' town with their summer resorts and playgrounds.

So many wonders of nature's creation are packed in this locality, such as the Garden of Gods, the gigantic red sandstone rocks, etc. some of these rocks balancing on small bases. There is the picturesque town of Manitou with its curative mineral springs, whose water tastes like the Pa-Ute Indian song I've heard, a brave beating the drum and singing in his weird Indian tongue in the Garden of Gods of which I only copied one line is still ringing in my ears:

Homa nina, nura, ponca,
Heya Heya Heya Heya-a-a-a!

"Hail To The Conquerors"

Evening Stars
WHITE VALLEY, — Well folks, the Evening Stars entertainment committee put over another big affair. As you know September 11 marked the 9th anniversary which we celebrated with a dance that turned out to be a great success both socially and financially. We had a very nice attendance, including the Bridgeville Progressors who talked of nothing else but softball games. Then we had another group from the Challengers lodge, and I'm sure Ham Sirca and John Pellan deserve a lot of thanks for their services as stewards behind the bar and I must say they were sober all evening. What a surprise. Here is another — Ernest Kvartich wasn't seen around the bar either. What seemed to be the trouble Ernie? Surely you didn't quit again, did you, or was the nite to nice for that? We shall see you at Bridgeville or Strabane soon. Now the Committee wishes to express its thanks to all who turned out and helped make a success of the dance. We shall see you soon.

Ductless Glands

By F. J. Arch M. D.
Supreme Medical Examiner
SSPZ.

Glands function in one of two ways. Some glands have ducts or openings and thus discharge their secretions through these channels. An example of this type of gland is the salivary gland which secretes saliva thru a duct into the mouth. Another type, known as the ductless gland, is in intimate contact with many small blood vessels and it pours its secretion directly into the blood stream without the agency of ducts.

The ductless glands are also known as the endocrine glands, which means a gland of internal secretion because it secretes a substance directly into the blood stream. This secreted substance is called a hormone, the word hormone coming from the Greek meaning "to excite." Actually, the hormone can either stimulate or depress bodily functions so that in a broader sense the true meaning of the word hormone has outgrown its earlier limited implication.

Each ductless gland represents a minute but highly complex laboratory from which numerous hormones are sent out to alter, direct and control most of our bodily functions. The glands that are now known to produce hormones which cause many changes in our body are the pituitary gland situated at the base of the brain; the thyroid gland which is located at the lower part of the neck; the adrenal glands which cap both kidneys; the parathyroid glands which consist of four or more small glands situated just behind the thyroid gland; the pancreas, stomach and intestines; the male and female sex glands, and the thymus gland just beneath the breast-plate.

Interest in the activities of the ductless glands has received great stimulation due to pioneer work of scientists in both this country and in Europe. These scientists have been able to identify and produce the female sex hormones. As a result of this impetus in the interest of these glands, various laboratories in the world have occupied much of their attention with the activities of these very important chemical regulators of the body. The various glands determine the sex of the unborn child. They control growth and development during childhood. They are extremely important in the management of body weight and in the development of the contour of our bodies. Consequently, what we are mentally, emotionally and physically is due in a great measure to the activity of our endocrine or so-called ductless glands.

WHY (ITALIAN) BOYS LEAVE HOME

Italy's new shipments of troops to Spain were defended today on the ground that they were to replace casualties and were not reinforcements.

For this reason, it was argued, the action was not in violation of the spirit of the British-Italian friendship treaty under which Italy undertook to cooperate with other nations in the withdrawal of troops. — U. P. dispatch from Rome printed in The New York Post.

HOOSIER PALS

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind. — At our first meeting held after that eventful trip to Bridgeville, Pa., we were very glad to see a good turnout of our members, both old and new.

During the meeting Sister Sophie Turk was selected to represent the Hoosier Pals on the National Athletic board. A date was set for a play to be given by the Vrtec No. 9 on November 19th. Sister Anna Turk, our president Sophie Krapes and Bro. August Powell will serve as a committee to see that everything will be in readiness. A dance will follow the play.

Forming the bowling teams was the next next discussion and there will be two five-man teams or if possible three teams to represent the Hoosier Pals at the next bowling tournament to be held in Cleveland.

Before and after the meeting snapshots taken at the Softball meet in Bridgeville were shown by various members. There was many a laugh in them.

Our next regular meeting will be held Monday, October 3, 1938 at 7:00 p.m. at National Home. Please try to attend in full numbers.

This and That in Hoosier Land

Home again and here is the latest news.

On the drug store corner, in beer taverns, on trolleys, almost everywhere can be found the Hoosier Pals, all in a huddle telling one another of his or her experiences and good time, recently had in Bridgeville. Have we got others interested I'll say.

Sister Sophie Krapes, our congenial president has finally recovered from that touch of laryngitis as did Adolph Madley and Vic Koeffel. Hey! "Chuck Koman", is that quarrel between the "Four Roses" and "Seagrams" settled yet?

Adolph (Hitler) Madley gave an impersonation of Sally Rand, Gypsy Rose Lee, Theda Bora, all combined. Boy did the Minsky Bros. miss something then. So great was the acclaim that he was chosen over all others as "The King of Burlesque from the Middle West."

Are there any Philo Vances, Dan Dunns or Sherlock Holmes in the crowd. We seem to have a mystery shrouding the illustrious "Muggsy" Coffin, ace pitcher of the Hoosier Pals. Perhaps some one in Cleveland, Chicago or Bridgeville or in our own fair city can give clues so as to solve the "Riddle of the red smudge on the victim's necktie."

The most perfect gentleman in the Hoosier crowd was none other than "Skeeter" Stonich. It so happens that he is a staunch believer in that "Early to bed and early to rise." He said he had a grand time even though he cut his nights short.

I wonder if he is getting old and is watching out for himself. I knew you when 'Skeeter,' and am I surprised.

Grumpy Krefel — "Deception" Both "Muggsy" Coffin and our own Adolph "Hitler" Madley were the main reason why the Hoosier Pals enjoyed the stay in Bridgeville. Lest we forget "Ajax" Todor and "Ducky" Turk, the Mutt and Jeff on the Hoosier team. These six can cause more headaches, than all the beer and whiskey drank in Penn. Well so long see you next week will continue on the other Pals.

A member.

The ardent young suitor drew his girl's young brother aside.

"Jimmy," he said, "how would you like to earn some pocket money for yourself?"

"Love to," came from the youth. "What do you want me to do?"

"Easy," replied Jimmy. "And if you gimme a dollar I'll get you the wig."

THE SLOVENES

AN OUTLINE OF A SOCIAL HISTORY OF THE SLOVENES
(FROM THE EARLIEST TIMES TO 1910)

By DRAGOTIN LONČAR, PH. D. (Prague)

TRANSLATED FROM THE SLOVENE

(Continuation)

V.

German colonization did much more harm to the Slovenes territory, and even more so nationally at the periphery. In the nucleus, colonization and Germanization were not so strong. It is for this reason, too, that the legal and social order of the Middle Ages, that is, feudalism, ruined the Slovenes socially, as well as nationally. It is necessary to note here that there were class differences among the Slovenes before. I dare say that the democracy of the old Slavs is an idealization. The original Slovenian nobility was disappearing with increasing rapidity. Much of it had fallen in the wars, the rest of it gradually estranged itself from its people. Assimilation with the foreign-born element brought the nobility economic security and, with this, social prestige. The free Slovenian proprietor began to sink into subjection and slavery. All those who submitted to foreign domination only after they were forced to do so by means of the sword lost their liberty according to martial law, and their land passed into possession of the conquerors. Prisoners of war and rebels became slaves or were treated like live stock which could be given away, traded or sold in the market as working power. The manorial lord had absolute right to annul marriages among the slaves. Later, Pope Hadrian IV (1154-1159) decreed that married slaves could not be divorced. From then on the children of slaves were recognized as legitimate. From the years 1177 and 1178 there have been preserved in the archives of the town of Stein, Lower Austria (in addition to another similar one) two tariff bills in which Slovenian girls are mentioned as export-goods ("wendisch-slavische Madchen"). The Crusades quickened the flourishing trade on the Danube between the Germans and the East. The name Slav meant "slave" to the Germans and Italians. Slavery was, however, being rapidly mitigated, and it became possible for slaves to buy their freedom. However, there are to be found various instances of slavery up to the most recent times (1781 and 1848).

The German kings, in their effort to get the imperial crown from Rome, had first of all to assure themselves of a free road over the Alps into Italy. This road went through Slovenian territory. We therefore see these kings granting many of their possessions to the clergy, because it seemed to them that they were more liable to support their efforts to get the imperial crown. If the clergy in the war between Church and State allied themselves with the enemies of the State, the German kings tried to wrest these land grants out of the hands of the clergy and put them in charge of nobles.

These estates of the clergy and nobility lay between the free Slovenian possessions. The ecclesiastical and secular lords tried to round off their possessions with these lands by combining small homesteads with theirs into large estates. They could easily do this because they had a legal right over their territory. But this increase of their possessions also occurred by means of acquisition and exchange. The church thus multiplied its wealth, particularly because pilgrims and crusaders bequeathed, sold, or lost their possessions to it through gambling. Nobles or other wealthy men often willed their property to the Church and monasteries at their death, either out of good intention or so that they could make amends through expensive gifts to the Church because of their sinful life. Secular lords increased their power particularly as defenders or advocates (advocatus) of the Church. Churches and monasteries asked secular princes to protect their rights and possessions by means of military service. Such protectors of the Church often became oppressors, who acquired their power through church possessions at the expense of their wards.

In exactly the same way, and to a still greater degree, free proprietors were losing their freedom under the pressure of the severe military laws of the Middle Ages. Whoever had a freehold had to go to war whenever and as many times as the king called for him. All the while he had to supply his own food and clothing. And now consider the countless and protracted wars of those times, particularly in the South! The small proprietors became impoverished under such circumstances. They therefore submitted themselves to the protection of the secular lords, and more particularly to the lords spiritual, and voluntarily left them their possessions, so that they instead of themselves could take over their military duties. In this way the free proprietors freed themselves from their military burdens, but at the same time lost their freedom because they had to pay taxes on their property and were bound to the soil. The number of bound Slovenian, and German peasants, rapidly increased. However, the relationship between master and subject was very clear. In some places the vassal could leave his descendants the estate as a land-fall, or he could sell it. In other places he could not sell his estate. In still other places—this was usually the case in Lower Styria, Carinthia, and Carniola—he did not even have the right of inheritance. In addition to this the vassal had to pay sundry taxes and do service in socage.*
