Dear Mici!

Accept thousands of heartfelt greetings and kisses. I found it really unusual I received only one letter since I left Yankee. I thought maybe you died or something unusual happened to you. That ring of yours fits my smallest finger, my pinky. Thank you for paying for Blaž's ticket, I like the thought of you always paying my debts.

Toni Mohorič was here yesterday, we got a bit drunk and went to Springer and later to Cimarron. Mici, you're telling me about that thing, saying you can't tell me the truth, I'm telling you, only God could distract me, and no one else. So Mici, we will get married, whenever you want after May, even the 1st of June if you want, whether we get the house or not. But I won't be coming to Yankee on Easter, don't think ill of it. It's because I don't like going around all the time because it costs too much. So I have to think about that. I'll be there on the first Sunday of May and I'll bring you some money for your dress, which I'll earn now. But don't think that I'm only earning money for the wedding. It wouldn't be good to not even have $5 in our pockets the next day. Mici, I just received a letter from the old place, as soon as I get to Yankee I'll bring it to you. They say that one of my brothers is also getting married, he's the second one this year, and he's going to live with his girl because her parents don't have a son.

So Mici, I also received a letter from our bride, the eldest, and in it was this little letter for you. I'm curious about what's written in it.

Now I'm greeting you affectionately and sending you thousands of warm kisses. Say hello to your parents and the whole family for me.

Also, let me know if they're doing anything in the fields and how are things in Yankee.

Our boss ordered me to ask your father if that farm at which you stayed at when you first arrived to Yankee is really for sale, and to let us know immediately. So tell your father to find that out and then tell me for how much it sells if he can find that out.

With sincerest greetings, I. Bizjak
