TROEDINI BOG

Iz Carigrada so poslali sv. Cirila k Saracenom, ki so sramotili krščansko vero in govorili: »Naša vera je boljša kot vaša. Kako vi, kristjani, ki v enega Boga verujete, zopet mešate in ga delite na tri in govorite, da je Oče in Sin in Sveti Duh? Ako morete razložiti jasno, potem pošljite može, ki morejo o tem govoriti in nas prepričati.« — In sv. Ciril Jim je takole razložil: »Vaša vera je kakor ozko in udobno morje, ki ga more preskočiti vsakdo, majhen ali velik. Naš Bog je pa kakor široko morje in le silni po umu ga preplavajo« (Zitje C. in M.).

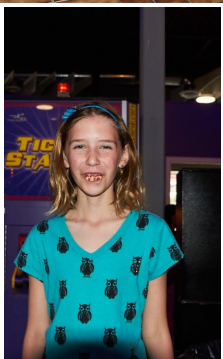

Sicer pa ta skrivnost ni tako odmaknjena od našega življenja kakor se nam morda zdi. Pisatelj Holzner v svoji znameniti knjigi o sv. Pavlu razlaga Pavlovo gledanje stvarjenja nekako takole: Prva božja oseba, Oče, rodi Sina, ki je popoln odsev njegovega sijaja. A kakor da se Oče ne more sprijazniti s tem, da bi bilo njegovega porajanja konec, nadaljuje svoje dejanje in porajanje te Besede podaljšuje v njenih neštetih možnih različnih in odtenkih, v vseh mogočih bitjih — od angelskih in človeških, do zadnjih motnih sledov bivanja v mrtvih snoveh, v mineralih in atomih in fotonih In kdo ve še v čem, kar je povsem na meji obstoječega. Vidite to je ustvarjeno v božji Besedi, iz ljubezni do nje, kot njen daljni odmev in odsev (Zužek M.: Božja beseda je živa, str. 50).

Zato imenuje Pavel Jezusa Prvorojenca vsega stvarstva in vse ima le po njem svoj obstoj: vse obstoji le zato, ker nosi v sebi podobo božjega Edinorojenca. Vse to se dogaja iz čiste zastonjske božje ljubezni. Tako se iz oceana Sv. Trojice razliva modrost, lepota in ljubezen na vse stvarstvo (prim. 1. berilo). Ljudje kar ne moremo razumeti, da se to božje življene razliva na vse občestvo vernih.

Bog se razdaja, človek se zapira vase: Saj nisem varuh svojega brata, pravi Kajn. V Isti hiši živijo, pa se ne poznajo. »Mnogo preveč laži nas veže... mnogo preveč sovraštva, napuha, da bi se mogli pogovoriti,« poje pesnik naših dni, Tone Kuntner.

SLOVENIAN SCHOOL - Children and parents after mass

V soboto 14. maja 2016 smo se z otroci in starši ob zaključku šolskega leta zbrali pri sveti maši. Bogu smo se zahvalili za vse, kar smo skupaj z otroci in družinami doživeli in se obogatili v tem letu. Po skupinski sliki so se otroci s starši odpeljali še na »hrib«, kjer se je nadaljeval drugi del dopoldneva ob »laser tag« in pizzi. Hvala učiteljicam, staršem in tudi otrokom, da Slovenska šola lahko bogati mlajše rodove.

Illustration

The historian Cecil Woodham-Smith published an excellent book in 1962 called The Great Hunger. It tells the story of the famine in Ireland that raged through the country during the years 1845 to 1849. The book is renowned for its fairness and accuracy. The Times newspaper spoke of the author's "thoroughness of research and fair-mindedness". So terrible and devastating is the subject matter that it can easily lead to distortions of anger and accusation that only cloud the issue under discussion. This book is rightly regarded as authoritative and reliable.

Any reading of the story brings to light the age-old truth that "out of sight is out of mind". What the eye does not see the heart does not grieve over. While government agents in Ireland sent back reports of terrible suffering and starvation, civil servants in London filtered these reports and did not appreciate the horror of what was happening. Human beings do not like bad news and we are reluctant to admit it into our minds. A catastrophe in a far-off land becomes a hiccup in our own front room.

In contrast to this insensitivity, a Yorkshire businessman, James Hack Tuke, made a visit to the west of Ireland, and in particular to Erris in Mayo, and what he saw stayed with him for the rest of his life. Tuke was a Quaker and a philanthropist and he worked for the alleviation of the suffering that he found. Food supplies, shelters for paupers and emigration schemes to Canada were all part of his work to bring relief.

Gospel Teaching

At the time of his own approaching suffering and death, Jesus tries to speak sensitively to his disciples about things that are too much for them. He has at various times made mention of his own death, but the disciples cannot take it in. We shrink away from bad news. We only begin to take it in when it actually happens. Knowing what is going to happen to him, and the terrible shock it will be for his friends, Jesus realises that some things will have to wait. Only after his resurrection will some things begin to make sense.

When Jesus finally leaves this world in his bodily form, he has no intention of leaving his friends orphaned, no intention of leaving them to fend for themselves. He tells the disciples that he will send the Spirit from his Father, and it is that Spirit who will begin to tell them things, to explain things to them, to help them to see and to understand the ways of God with us.

In the Acts of the Apostles we hear exactly how that Spirit came upon the disciples, and how they were changed people as a result. Not only were they given great courage and enthusiasm for their mission, but they were also given wisdom and insight and understanding of everything that had happened to them and to Jesus in those recent days. And as time went on, that wisdom and that understanding and that insight grew. Being docile to the Spirit of God, in silence, in prayer, in study and in contemplation, the disciples of the Lord were led by the Spirit into the ways of truth.

Application

The Spirit of God lives in the Church and in each person. This is the gift and the promise that the Lord made to us. And so if we turn to the Spirit and ask for guidance and inspiration our prayer will not go unheeded. We will be given wisdom, insight and understanding. We will be given sensitivity to the needs of others and a loving desire to help them. These gifts of the Spirit are all forms of “seeing” and once we see, we will know how to act.

St Paul, in his life journey, was given new sight by the Lord after being struck blind on the Damascus road. His new sight proved to be tremendous vision. He could see the glory of God ahead of him as our glorious destination. He could also see that even our sufferings can be beneficial events in our life, that we can bring good out of them. Suffering leads to patience, and patience leads to perseverance, and perseverance to hope, and our hope will not deceive us.

The brightness of God now blesses our lives and calls us to bless one another, in the name of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit. Amen.
