

LIFE AND LABORS of Rt. Rev. FREDERIC BARAGA, First Bishop of Marquette, Mich. By P. CHRYSOSTOMUS VERWYST, O. F. M. of Los Angeles, Cal.

These extracts from Bishop Baraga's journal show that the Indians of that place were stiff-necked heathens and that at least then he did not make many converts.

But his visit to St. Martin's Bay was not entirely fruitless. 'The word of God penetrated the hearts of those obdurate pagans, almost against their will as it were.

He also resolved to build a small church there, in order to have a suitable place to offer up Holy Mass, preach the Word of God, and teach catechism.

Scarcely had Baraga returned from this new mission, when he made preparations to visit another, formerly attended by the Jesuit Fathers stationed at the Sault and which was but one day's journey distant.

This promise was fulfilled during the following summer. B. Baraga bought a large quantity of lumber and other building material and had it shipped by boat to the Indian village.

"During summer," B. Baraga writes, "I made my visitations, partly on water, partly by land, or riding. Last spring I visited the missionaries stationed at the copper-mines, who are all very active in the service of God for the salvation of souls entrusted to them.

Jacker attends two churches and the number of Catholics of both churches is about four thousand. A second priest would be very desirable so that each of these churches would have its own resident priest.

"In like manner Rev. John Chebul has four churches and congregations to attend, which are several days' journey from each other. He tries assiduously, as much as at all possible, to attend them, but in so doing he is ruining his health.

The good bishop's letter gives a very imperfect idea of his daily labors as bishop and missionary. During the winter of 1860 and 1861 he was alone most of the time, without an assistant priest.

Bishop Baraga's labors during the year 1863— anecdotes about Bishops Baraga and Marty. As our sources of information in regard to the latter years of B. Baraga are meagre, we prefer to give the letters, which he wrote to the Leopoldine Society, in full.

SPORTS AND SOCIAL ACTIVITIES Edited by Stanley Zupan.

THE SUCCESSFUL XVI CONVENTION

Just a few weeks ago we were eagerly looking toward Pittsburgh, Pa., where one of our greatest and very important conventions was held.

I wish I could understand every word of the conventional minutes which were printed in our official organ "Glasilo" because I never attended a Slovenian school. Thanks to one of the young delegates who afterward explained to me all the important events and points during the past convention, pertaining the benefits of the young members of our Union.

Among the 184 delegates and Supreme officers, assembled at session, there was also for the first time a considerable number of young representatives (delegates) male and female. Those delegates were all treated as other brothers and sisters friendly and in a real American gentlemanly manner.

I was also informed, that the new By-Laws are giving to the respective subordinate lodges the privilege to correspond with the headquarters of the K. S. K. J. in the English language.

But at least not last, I have to mention also the most important rule (order) of the last convention giving us more credit in our "Glasilo."

The gentlemen of the convention gladly decided to sacrifice every week a whole page in the official organ (Glasilo) just for the English speaking or young members. This step is to be congratulated and be thanked for.

After New Year we will have always plenty of opportunity to publish our social doings, sporting affairs etc. in the "Glasilo." We hope, that in the future the fraternal spirit among the American Slovenian Catholic boys and girls will spread throughout our beloved country for our beloved K. S. K. J. A young member.

BABBLES

Sweet summer breezes! I now have my vacation to spend, away from the cares of picks, shovels, cement mixers, air hammers and other playthings.

First of all I would like to spend a few days in the mountains such as in Colo. Such a vacation can be enacted at home. Dress up in hiking attire, proceed to the basement, take hammer and chisel in hand and puncture the water boiler.

To make it more realistic you can break a few milk bottles and scatter them around the basement. To appreciate it you must step on one of the broken bottles and fall at least six times.

When you get to the third floor on the hundredth climb purposely slip and grab for an electric fixture. You will then be enacting the business of slipping when at an altitude of a few thousand feet, and grasping for a tree rut.

To climax the day's enjoyment, fall off the roof and you will feel as if you climbed several thousand feet high up into the Colo. mountains. As to the mountain flowers (I forgot to mention) notice the wall paper designs and when you are running up and down the steps, At night take a dozen blankets and sleep in the ice box.

Think it over.

The other day I had the occasion to dine with a prominent business man of this city. Having ordered our meal we delved into a varied conversation. I noticed that he appeared rather down-hearted and questioned him as to his condition.

"I feel as if I had been tied and thrown in deep water, with my best friends standing on shore and enjoying my misfortune. Well here is the story. I have some friends that I have treated as friends should treat friends. A few weeks ago I intended to venture into a business project. I had everything in readiness, even the approval of these good friends of mine.

He explained how disgusted he was and finished his lunch by sipping the coffee that stood before him the entire lunch hour. "That's it," he said, making an unpleasant expression as he sipped the luke-warm coffee.
