

LIFE AND LABORS of Rt. Rev. FREDERIC BARAGA, First Bishop of Marquette, Mich.

The poor bishop, perspired freely, notwithstanding the great cold. They kept walking on through the virginal forest until noon, the walking being very fatiguing to the good bishop. At noon they kindled a fire and cooked tea, and this tea and a piece of bread was their dinner. After dinner they resumed their journey and by evening reached the wigwam of an Indian chief, they having traveled twenty miles that day.

set out in season to meet their beloved bishop and escort him in triumph to St. Ignace. When they drove up they alighted from their sleighs, and, kneeling down on the ice, implored the episcopal benediction, which the good bishop gave them with a heart full of emotion. And now followed mutual salutations and acts of kindness. Everyone wished him to partake of the refreshments they had brought along, which was done by the weary travelers.

On the 15th of April we find this expressive entry: "Sunday. Great spiritual misfortune this morning! Instead of rising at 3 o'clock, rose at 5 — two little hours absolutely lost! Preached two sermons to empty pews. I think the church was never so empty as today. The mail expected for three weeks arrived at last." We must bear in mind that these entries were not made with a view to publication. They are written in three or four languages. Often an Indian or Italian or French word or sentence will occur in the same entry. This shows they were intended to be strictly private. We publish occasionally one or another to give our readers an insight into the inner life of Bishop Baraga. The above-given entry speaks volumes. It discloses Bishop Baraga as a man of interior-life, a man of meditation, even on Sunday, when there is so much work.

Table with sports scores: BABBLES, First of all I must explain — I have been very busy of late and many times have not had the time to read the proofs of the material that is plastered in this column — result, as you might have noticed, many mistakes. I promise, however, from now on to read the proofs if I have to do it while I am shaving. Tenk You.

Now to get down to business. Altho I still work on the road and still hope to give lessons on how to cut your hair at home with a breadknife, I must drop the former and start to relate about my post mortem or rather post motore our trip to Joliet, Ill. It happened over the Fourth. Three other lads and myself, that is four horse-men all together. We left our Cleveland Friday nite after buying some liniment and over-halls for our wonderful trip. I should say underful trip as we only had about a dozen flat tires. Joe and Frank are dandy drivers; they seem to have a seeking eye for running over all the nails in the road. Honest and truly I pulled out five at once out of one tire. You notice I said I.

Writes R. S. from Chisholm, Minn. — Sport Ed.: "I have heard of you and your trick mustache. You would oblige me very much if you would publish your picture so I can get a good squint at it. I would ask you for your picture, but you know that isn't very conventional."
